YOU'RE JUST MINUTES AWAY FROM ADDRESSING A LEADING GUEST COMPLAINT

GUESTS WANT A GOOD NIGHT'S REST.

But noise often prevents it. It's been a top complaint for decades.

Despite their discomfort, dissatisfied guests are more likely to tell others - in person or online - than hotel staff. That leaves you little opportunity to address the problem, or perhaps even unaware of it. In the end, your property's reputation and bottom line suffer.

If guests do complain, there's also a cost to making things right.

WE'VE ALL HEARD THAT SILENCE IS GOLDEN, BUT THE COMFORT ZONE FOR SOUND ISN'T ZERO.

Noise persists because many properties keep using the same techniques to try to control it. While needed to address certain aspects of acoustics, traditional methods involving structure and décor often intensify an underlying problem - one that might surprise you.

Most guest rooms are too silent to be quiet.

In fact, our global testing shows that the background sound level is typically 28 to 33 decibels. In this 'pin drop' environment, just about any noise seems loud and is disruptive to sleep.

Guests might try to use the HVAC system to raise their room's background sound level to cover or mask intruding noises, but this equipment isn't designed for this purpose. Mobile apps and other gadgets aren't able to deliver truly comfortable and effective masking.

It's the right idea, but the wrong sound.
